Matching Grant Success in Galette-Chambon

Hen houses are popping up all over Haiti, and the small town of Galette Chambon is no exception. Thanks to a strong partnership with St Francis Xavier Parish in Wilmette, IL, the Immaculee Conception parish was able to realize “Poulettes for Progress”. In March 2015, St Francis Xavier parish was awarded a $5,000 Hens for Haiti sustainable agriculture matching grant to establish an egg production facility to feed the local community. Since that time, a facility was constructed and two women were trained by agronomists from University of the Nouvelle Grand'Anse in Jeremie to be caretakers of the hens. Fr Aupont and the Galette Chambon community look forward to the arrival of 80 hens this fall as Hens for Haiti continues to eagerly follow the progress of his project.

Due to the success of this grant process, as well as the enthusiastic response to the first call for proposals, Hens for Haiti will offer another matching grant for 2016. Keep a lookout for the RFP release on December 1st.
